YANKS STORM INTO BATTERED COLOGNE

Meandering Along the Main Stem By WASH FAYETTE

Well, it has been about three weeks since the groundhog saw his shadow and was supposed to have retired for another six weeks' snooze while wintry winds rage and King Winter holds high revelry.

So far, the old belief about the groundhog and the weather has come true this time, although the opposite has been true about as many times as the groundhog prediction has been fulfilled.

Now we will see if the next three weeks are as wintry as the last three, or whether the groundhog belief has been shattered once more.

A certain Washington C. H. professional man told me of a rather good system he has used at times for getting rid of callers who stay too long in his office when he is busy, the kind that remain and want to chat long after all phases of any business they have had there are exhausted.

"I usually am on some committee that is making a drive for funds," he remarked, "and when a caller spends too much time interfering with my work I start to work on him for a big contribution for some fund. In at least five out of six cases this usually causes that caller to remember he has an urgent appointment somewhere else."

Once more I am asking all of you folks who send news matter or other material for publication, to sign your names to the articles sent, so that its authenticity can be established.

It frequently happens that when no name is signed, that much delay is occasioned, and in some instances, material is omitted entirely, because it can not be confirmed.

Sign your name to everything you send to its source may be known and no delay occasioned in its publication.

During the last two or three years I have seen hundreds of persons after they have received letters from relatives and friends in the armed forces, and their faces have been a real study, some reflecting great joy and others plainly showing disappointment, possibly in not receiving the "right" letter.

I have seen women in tears, standing in the lobby of the Post Office. Most of these were tears of joy, and others of sorrow, when their hearts were touched by the contents of the letter.

Only this week as I was going to the Post Office I met a woman who was sobbing with joy and clasping a letter to her heart. "He's all right!" she exclaimed almost hysterically, and continued on up the street, still crying and still holding the letter over her heart.

These have been years of yearning, strain, uncertainty and heartbreaks mingled with joy, and such things must continue for a time (not so long, I believe) when battle flags will be furled and the desperate nations will be overpowered and disarmed for all time.

GOVERNMENT WHEAT GOES TO LEND-LEASE

Expanding Army Requirements Also To Be Met

WASHINGTON, March 5.—(P)—The Commodity Credit Corporation is making available more government-held wheat to the armed services for export and the amount may reach 100,000,000 bushels within the next few months.

CCC officials said today most of the wheat is for the army to meet its rapidly expanding requirements. CCC added, that lend-lease demands also have picked up, particularly in France.

CCC pointed, asserted it had been supplying army and lend-lease export requirements from government stocks for many months. However, the CCC official added, increased requests have prompted the CCC to start purchases now of wheat held under government loan which the CCC had not expected to take over until after May 1.

tions of an early break in the jam of wage cases involving fringe awards.

An informed source said Economic Stabilizer Fred M. Vinson and the War Labor Board shortly may reach agreement taking WLB out from under a directive giving the Office of Price Administration veto power over such fringe awards.

Vinson still would be able to approve or reject the board's findings. The agreement, however, would permit the WLB to clear away the accumulation of cases that has grown since Vinson brought OPA into the picture last (Please Turn to Page Six)

Continued Aerial Assaults Close Formosa Schools and Students Of Tokyo Organized Into Fire Brigades—Guerrillas Slaughter Nips on Luzon

By LEONARD MILLIMAN

Hopeless counter-attacks and Filipino Guerrillas added new thousands of Japanese dead on Iwo Island and the Philippines as the increasing tempo of the American air onslaught forced Japan to close primary schools in Formosa today and organize Tokyo students into fire brigades.

Waves of Superfortresses struck Tokyo through snow clouds Sunday morning, and bombers raked airdromes the length of Formosa.

Ten more B-29s raided Tokyo again today, the Japanese said.

U. S. Marines made limited gains in northern Iwo Jima Sunday and hurled back a Japanese counter-attack in which hundreds of Japanese were killed, Fleet Adm. Chester W. Nimitz announced today.

Enemy dead numbered 12,864 as of 6 P. M. Saturday, out of an estimated garrison of 20,000. There were 81 prisoners, the majority Korean laborers.

Hand-to-Hand Fight In hand to hand fighting, the battle-worn Leathernecks of Maj. Gen. Clifton D. Cates' Fourth Division continued their advance over terrain which Nimitz described as "naturally suited to defensive operations."

2 ROBBERY CHARGES FOR KENTUCKY MEN

NEWPORT, Ky., March 5.—(P)—Two charges involving armed robbery hung over Albert Gray, 22, and Norbert Zitt, 27, held by police today in connection with a bandit raid Friday night on the Club Kenridge, a suburban Cincinnati night spot in which four men obtained between $4,000 and $7,000.

Police held a Boone County warrant for the pair, charging them with theft of more than $200 from a tourist camp near Lawrence, Ky., and said other charges would be filed during Monday in connection with the cafe holdup.

The trio was convicted of bludgeoning Jacob Reinstadler to death in a robbery attempt at his jewelry store in Cincinnati.

Weatherman Holds Key To Ohio Valley Floods

CINCINNATI, March 5.—(P)—The brown waters of the swollen Ohio River continued to swirl through the Cincinnati area today at the 62.2-foot level it has maintained the past 20 hours as rivermen awaited the total result of a predicted rainfall.

High temperatures (in the 60's), a duplication of yesterday's balmy weather, but accompanied by rain, is the way U. S. River Forecaster George Marth said the day would go.

Just how much rain and over how great an area, Marth would not venture, but he declared a heavy, general downpour would change the present optimistic picture into a dangerous one.

Sunday's blue skies and warm temperature brought thousands of motorists to lookout points on Cincinnati's seven hills and jammed parkways parallel to the river. "It's the heaviest traffic I've seen since gasoline rationing," declared Police Lt. Lloyd Simon. Although the area's flood stage

REPRIEVES GRANTED FOR CONDEMNED TRIO

COLUMBUS, March 5.—(P)—Governor Frank J. Lausche today granted 30-day reprieve to Johnnie Mae Gardner of Cincinnati, and her two male companions, previously scheduled to die in the electric chair Wednesday night for the slaying of a Cincinnati jeweler last April 8.

The reprieve, which the governor said was granted on recommendation of the State Clemency Commission, ends at midnight April 5.

The trio was convicted of bludgeoning Jacob Reinstadler to death in a robbery attempt at his jewelry store in Cincinnati.

AIR TRANSPORT MONOPOLY PROPOSITION IS DENIED

WASHINGTON, March 5.—(P)—The justice department gave a thumbs-down opinion today on single-company operation of America's international air transportation.

The department said it is opposed also to surface carriers owning or controlling international airline companies.

DANISH PATRIOTS HOLDS UP RAILROADS

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, March 5.—(P)—A special communique today said the Danish underground was attacking German troop movements so effectively not a single train is able to reach Germany without having been delayed.

The troop movements presumably were related to the withdrawal of German divisions from Normandy for defense of the Reich.

France in Huff Again Over World Peace Plans

WASHINGTON, March 5.—(P)—The government announced today that all United Nations except Poland are being asked to attend the world security conference at San Francisco.

If all accept as expected this will mean an attendance of 44 nations.

By a last minute hitch France refrained from joining in sponsoring the conference. This leaves sponsorship to the United States, Russia, China and Britain.

France, the official announcement said, has agreed to participate in the conference but felt that, partly because she had not helped work out the Dumbarton Oaks proposals, she should not join in sponsoring the invitations.

The voting procedure agreed on by Roosevelt, Stalin and Churchill (Please Turn to Page Two)

SLUM CLEARING LAW WILL BE PROPOSED

COLUMBUS, March 5.—(P)—A slum clearance plan for cities, sponsored by the Ohio Planning Conference, will be proposed as a law in the state legislature today by Sen. Evert E. Addison, Franklin County Republican.

Addison's bill would give municipalities the right to condemn blighted areas and pay for them through the issuance of revenue bonds. After acquiring the properties, the municipalities would be empowered to sell its equity to private enterprise, which would use its own funds for improvements.

Such projects would be subject to the same taxes as private holdings.

Vinson Is Named Federal Loan Boss

Economic Stabilizer Appointed by President To Take Place of Jesse Jones After Commerce Department Functions Divided To Make Wallace Secretary

WASHINGTON, March 5.—(P)—Fred M. Vinson, economic stabilization director, was nominated today by President Roosevelt to be federal loan administrator.

Vinson succeeds Jesse Jones as head of the loan agencies handling billions of dollars. They were severed from the Commerce Department so they would not come under the jurisdiction of Henry A. Wallace. Before the Senate confirmed Wallace for secretary of commerce, special legislation returned the Federal Loan Administration to an independent status.

A former member of Congress from Kentucky and a former justice of the United States Circuit Court for the District of Columbia, Vinson has been stabilization director since James F. Byrnes gave (Please Turn to Page Two)

Reds Close Double Trap on 200,000 Germans in Sweep to Baltic

(By The Associated Press)

American tanks and infantry stormed into Cologne at 7:10 A. M. today in a final powerful attack on the great Rhineland metropolis, and slowly fought toward the heart of Germany's fourth largest city.

The final assault started in the darkness of 4 A. M.

Maj. Gen. Maurice Rose's Third Armored Division passed the city limits, striking from the north through the suburb of Bockelmuend. There the tanks were about three miles from the towering Gothic cathedral at the heart of Cologne, the most ravaged city of the Rhineland.

House to house fighting was touched off, AP Correspondent Don Whitehead, with the First Army, reported.

Germans Trapped

Some 4,000 desperately fighting Germans were trapped outside city when the Third Armored Division cut the last road leading to the Hohenzollern bridge across the Rhine, 1,300 to 1,700 feet wide at Cologne.

Cologne lay under smoke. The thunder of battle was rolling across the city in increasing fury as the Americans closed in for the kill on the 11th day of their great drive from the Roer River, 21 miles behind.

To the north, the American Ninth Army captured Homberg, a manufacturing suburb of Duisburg, and the approaches to two Rhine bridges. The enemy garrison in this city of 35,000 surrendered three hours after midnight.

Hundreds of retreating Nazis were caught on the west side of the Rhine and were being flushed from basements in house to house manhunts for any German male of military age.

Many enemy officers were caught trying to escape by donning civilian clothes. The 334th infantry regiment which captured Homberg, were in no mood for masquerades.

Lt. Gen. William H. Simpson's men stood on the Rhine for 15 miles, and Canadians to the north held another 52-mile stretch of the west banks.

Thousands Surrendered

Germans surrendered by the thousands; the total in the offensive passed 60,000. A blackout was imposed partially on Third Army movements toward Coblenz and the middle Rhine, suggesting an imminent breakthrough there.

The Seventh Army fought in the Siegfried line just outside the Saar capital of Saarbruecken, which was under heavy fire.

Artillery also was pouring heavy fire in passed salves from American guns outside Cologne, ringed on all its sides west of the Rhine.

Smoke rolled up from fires and explosions set by American shells. The Doughboys inside Cologne caught flashing glimpses through the pall of the tower of the 13th century cathedral. Artillery and troops had been ordered to hold their fire away from the magnificent structure.

DRESDEN IS WIPED OUT

LONDON, March 5.—(P)—A German war correspondent said today that Dresden, chief city of Saxony, was wiped out by Allied air attacks on Feb. 14 and 15 and that "tens of thousands" of its citizens were buried under the ruins.

"It's a trick," said Helen. "It's a frame-up!"

"What is?"

"Aunt Minerva sent him up here as bait. It's as plain as the nose on your face."

"Leave my nose out of it," Aggie said. "I'm having enough trouble with it as it is."

"She wants me to come home," Helen went on. "And she's counting on Philip Brownell to lure me back."

"That doesn't sound like your Aunt Minerva," said Aggie.

"I can't picture her in the role of match maker, or Cupid, or whatever you want to call it."

"I can picture my Aunt Minerva in any role," said Helen. "A followed a two-day hearing last week.

The application was described by attorneys as the first filed under the Tydings amendment, and was regarded as a test case.

"This court is of the opinion," said Judge Underwood in denying the writ, "that none of the facts of conditions which would invalidate the action of the draft board have been established."

"No showing has been made that such action was arbitrary and capricious, nor has it been established that the decision of the board is without substantial evidence to support it."

FAYETTE FARM BUREAU VOTES FOR SLOW TIME

Action Taken at Directors Meeting Held Here Saturday

The board of directors of the Fayette Farm Bureau Saturday afternoon reaffirmed their position taken a year ago favoring slow time or central time for Fayette County and Ohio.

The Farm Bureau in connection with the Grange, was very active in this matter last year. Copies of the resolution and action of the board will be sent to the State Farm Bureau Trustees at Columbus and also local Farm Bureau Councils will be asked to take action. Some councils have already expressed their opinion for slow time.

A poll taken at county Farm Bureau annual meetings during the winter showed that rural people were unanimous in keeping Ohio on slow time.

The board also voted a contribution of $40 to the Red Cross War Fund Campaign and $20 to the local Polio Fund.

Two members of the board of directors were present at the meeting.

In Washington C. H. the time question has not been taken up, and probably will not be for some time.

Last year after changing back and forth the city adopted fast or war time, which was observed until early fall.

The Court House clock was left on slow time throughout the period that the city offices were operated on fast time.

SHERMAN SPEAKMAN FOUND DEAD SUNDAY

Prominent Farmer Is Victim of Heart Attack

William Sherman Speakman, 75, prominent farmer residing on the New Holland and Crownover Mill Road, was found dead in his barn, Sunday afternoon about 3:30, by his son, Erceel, after he had been missing since early Sunday forenoon. A heart attack had caused his death.

Mr. Speakman had been in poor health for some time, and he had gone to the barn to feed some stock when he was stricken.

Surviving are his widow, who has been ill for some time; his son, Erceel, residing near the home farm; three brothers, David, Samuel and Joshua, all of Washington C. H.; two sisters, Mrs. Orville Timmons, Kingston, and Mrs. Ella Smith, Columbus; four grandchildren and three great grandchildren.

Mr. Speakman had spent his entire life in the New Holland and Crownover Mill community.

Funeral services will be held Tuesday at 2 P. M. at the Kirkpatrick and Son Funeral Home in New Holland and burial made in the New Holland Cemetery.

Rev. V. C. Stump will conduct the services.

what they were fighting and for what their comrades had died. A B-29, returning from a Tokyo raid, landed on the southern bomber field. Repairs were made to the fuel line and the plane continued back to its Marianas base.

Almost half of the B-29 losses in the Japanese Empire strikes from the Marianas have resulted from crash landings on the last lap of the 1,500-mile homeward flight. Now cripples can stop at Iwo. Also Iwo's airfields will mean substantially increased bomb loads for the sky giants.

Compressed into a tightening area on Iwo's northern end, the cornered Japanese are fighting with untamed fury.

Battle of Luzon

American doughboys pushed deeper today into the mountains of northern Luzon, reported headquarters of Japanese Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita, as Gen. Douglas MacArthur disclosed Filipino Guerrillas had cleared one entire northern province of Nipponese troops.

Other Americans overcame the last Japanese resistance in Manila, continued their eastward pressure to secure the city's water supply area and occupied two more Philippine islands.

MacArthur's communique said units of the 25th and 32nd Divisions had made new gains in the northern mountains.

Other first corps units have been engaging the Japanese for days in the vicinity of Rosario, some 25 or 30 miles southwest of Baguio, the Philippine summer capital.

Guerrillas Kill Japs

The Guerrillas, under Col. R. W. Volkman, struck in the north coast province of Ilocos Norte. MacArthur said their "irregular type of fighting" baffled the Jap-

Mainly About People

Mr. and Mrs. Howard VanHorn (nee Jeanne Thornton) of Columbus are announcing the birth of a son Sunday, March 4 at Doctor's Hospital.

Mrs. J. E. Everhart was removed to Mt. Carmel Hospital, Monday morning, for observation, the trip being made in the Hook ambulance.

Miss Lavard Frances Adams was removed from Mt. Carmel Hospital, Columbus, to her home on Bell Street, Monday morning, in the Cox and Parrett ambulance. She recently underwent an appendectomy.

Lt. and Mrs. R. J. Stout (the former Evelyn Creamer) announce the birth of a seven pound and two ounce son, Gary Creamer Stout, at Harlingen, Texas, where Lt. Stout is stationed. The child was born March 2.

Mrs. R. M. Burnett and infant son, Robert Glenn, were removed from White Cross Hospital, Columbus, Saturday afternoon to 119 Circle Avenue where they reside. The trip was made in the Cox and Parrett ambulance.

Lt. Col. Burnett is serving with our armed forces in Germany.

ness, who suffered "extraordinarily heavy losses, running into the thousands."

Activity in this area might also threaten the northern port of Apariti, one of the few ports left in Japanese hands.

Fighting in downtown Manila ended Saturday night. Doughboys of the 37th Division cleaned out the last Japanese from the Finance Building.

The new landings on the Sibuyan Sea islands of Ticao and Burias, announced by MacArthur Saturday, showed the Japanese positions on Luzon's southern Pico Peninsula.

They were the 19th and 20th Philippine islands invaded by MacArthur's forces. They were occupied by units of the American Division.

Advances in Burma

"Severe" Japanese losses were reported from Burma as British troops closed in on Mandalay from the north and west.

In the increasing Philippines-based air raids on Formosa, all types of bombers were hurled against airfields scattered along the west coast of the island guarding the China coast and southwest approaches to Japan. Thirty-two enemy planes were destroyed. In two days Philippines-based planes sank eight Nipponese ships. Liberators out of China sank another.

More than 150 Superforts made yesterday's raid on Tokyo. They fought sleet, hail, snow and little anti-aircraft fire. Tokyo said Nagoya, Toyohashi and Hamamatsu also were bombed.

Only one B-29 was lost, and the crew was saved.

Iwo's bomber field, from which the Japanese once sent raiders against B-29 bases in the Marianas, is being used by American hospital planes to evacuate wounded.

Tanks came to the aid of weary Marines trying to dislodge Japanese holed in an inactive volcano on northeastern Iwo. But Adm. Chester W. Nimitz reported no substantial change in the Yank lines.

JIM DEVAULT'S GRANDDAUGHTER FREE IN MANILA

Telegram Comes a Week After Message Saying Son Is Liberated

Jim Devault's cup of joy today was full almost to overflowing. His granddaughter—little 7-year-old Janet Devault whom he has never seen—has been rescued by the American doughboys who stormed Santo Tomas prison during the liberation battle of Manila. A telegram from Provost Marshal General Lerch in Washington, D. C. has just brought him the news for which he has been hoping and waiting.

The telegram started out by saying "official report received announces rescue by our forces of your granddaughter, Janet Devault, formerly interned at Santo Tomas. Physical condition good."

The notice also said he might send a 12-word message free to his granddaughter through the American Prisoner of War Information Service. The remaining 13 words of the 25-word message, it was explained, are "essential for address and code symbols."

Little Janet is the daughter of Jim Devault's son, Philip, and his Filipino wife. The grandfather was elated over the three words "physical condition good" in the telegram.

He had been notified only last week that his son was among more than 3,000 prisoners liberated when the Yanks crashed the gates behind which they had nearly starved for more than three years. His physical condition, however, was described as only "fair."

What has become of Philip's wife, remains unknown.

Philip Devault went to the Philippines about 14 years ago as an American soldier. When his enlistment expired, he settled down in Manila.

small nation may have the right to bring charges against a great power and get them heard by the proposed world security council even though the great power itself may object.

On any vote to decide that a great power was threatening the peace, or to take action against that power, each of the five great nations would have, in effect, a veto.

The State Department announcement coincided with Senator Vandenberg's acceptance of President Roosevelt's invitation to be a delegate to the conference, completing the American delegation of eight.

The Michigan senator said he had made his decision after "an exchange of cordial and satisfactory personal letters with the president."

This exchange clarified "my right of free action," he said.

As a delegate, Vandenberg said, "I wish to do everything within my power to establish a practical system of collective security as a basis for effective peace."

White House assurance to Sen. Vandenberg that his invitation to the conference is without strings brought Republican expressions of pleasure and relief.

The letter exchange between Vandenberg and Mr. Roosevelt coincided with word that the White House has asked Vice President Truman to serve as a liaison with the Senate to clear the way for favorable action on the forthcoming treaties.

There was no direct comment on the omission of Poland from the list. Officials here expressed the hope the new Polish "Provisional Government of National Unity," which the Big Three proposed at Yalta may be created and recognized in time for an invitation to be sent.

Resistance from remnants of six tank and Volksgrenadier divisions was comparatively light on the fringe of the city. The Germans had pulled most defenders deeper into the ruins, leaving anti-tank and flak guns to guard approaches.

Infantrymen went in to clean out factories and houses in which the Germans were holed up. Tanks opened fire at point blank range into houses which were strongpoints.

While tanks struck down from the north, the 104th Timberwolf Division was driving in from the west.

Prisoners captured in the first thrust said most Nazis had pulled back to a line of defense on the Lingstrasse, which circles Cologne.

Third Army Poised

The American Third Army advanced up to three and a half miles on a 30-mile front between Pruem and Trier, capturing eight towns including Kopp, 47 miles west of Koblenz.

The Seventh Army cleared nearly all of Forbach, fought into Stiring-Wendel and shelled Saarbruecken.

A death pocket on Germans southwest of Koenigsberg in East Prussia was tightened. Other Soviets were within 30 miles of Danzig.

The Pomeranian drives put Russians in control of nearly all Germany east of the Oder from the Baltic south to Moravia.

USED CLOTHING DEPOTS SET UP FOR WEDNESDAY

Churches' Drive Begins for Clothing for War Refugees

Six depots for leaving used clothing to be sent to war refugees will be open Wednesdays and Sundays for the next two weeks, Mrs. John Case, general chairman of the clothing drive, said today. Wednesday will be the first day the churches are open.

McNair Memorial Church, Mrs. Clifford Foster, chairman; North Street Church of Christ, Mrs. Leo Cox; A.M.E. Church, Mrs. D. F. Lee, chairman; the Gregg Street Church of Christ in Christian Union, Mrs. Arthur George; and the First Baptist Church, Mrs. Ed Reser, are the churches to be open. In addition, all clothing which would have been taken to the Second Baptist Church will be left with Mrs. Minnie Locklear at 528 Wilson Street.

The churches will be open from 11 A. M. to 8 P. M. on Wednesday and all day on Sunday, March 7, 11, 14 and 18 are the dates when the churches are to be open.

Mrs. Case said all types of clothing, wool or cotton underwear, coats, sweaters, dresses, shoes, layettes, warm caps and bedding, particularly quilts and blankets are needed.

"Give as generously as you can. The need is great," Mrs. Case said.

won Homberg and pushed on to the two bridges leading across the Rhine to Duisburg, which the Germans said they had blown up.

Canadian and British troops were wiping out the German stand farther north, where resistance was most bitter. The Canadians gained the Rhine bank north of Xanten.

First Army doughboys struck within 10 miles of Bonn on the Rhine. The U. S. Third Army was within 40 miles or less of the Rhine. Still farther south, the American Seventh Army won most of Forbach and shelled Saarbruecken.

The aerial offensive from west and south against Germany rolled on.

RAF Mosquitos last night without loss hurled blockbusters on Berlin and Essen.

Four hundred U. S. heavy bombers from Britain assaulted the railway network at Chemnitz and oil refineries at Harburg this morning in the 21st straight day of sustained aerial offensive.

The Eighth Air Force bombers were escorted by 600 Mustangs and Thunderbolts which fanned out seeking German trains and road convoys.

White one force of Mosquitos hit Berlin last night another group attacked Essen, important rail hub at the northern end of the Ruhr. The air ministry said no planes were lost.

G.I. Joe Knows
Where Your Red Cross Money Goes

Norman Armbrust, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Armbrust, has been a German prisoner for nearly two years. One of the first Fayette Countians to be taken by the Nazis, Norman knows from two years' bitter experience the sort of food the Nazis serve.

"Contribute all you can to the Red Cross for they are doing a great job over here," he wrote his parents.

That goes for everyone, not just Norman Armbrust's parents, for the Red Cross services are not confined to prisoners of war alone. They are available to every serviceman and woman.

Those services include maintaining clubs in every theater of war, following troops right behind the front lines with canteen facilities, contacting the families of servicemen in emergencies and bringing just a little taste of home to boys thousands of miles away from the United States.

The Red Cross War Fund goal here is $28,800. Before long you will be asked to give. Don't miss that chance to send a little of America overseas.

"THE MERRY MONAHANS"

THE WAR TODAY

—By DEWITT MACKENZIE—

German hope of making a major stand in the Cologne Plain has been killed by the steam-roller Allied advance, but Nazi Field Marshal von Rundstedt continues to fight a grim rear-guard action at several main crossings.

The German commander is in the midst of one of the most dangerous operations war can produce—retreat across a great river under attack. It's a task that would tax the military genius of any age, and it must be said for Rundstedt that he has been doing a workmanlike job. His undoubted capabilities add to the credit of Eisenhower and his captains in their magnificent offensive.

Marshal von Rundstedt's last-ditch resistance west of the Rhine is for two purposes. First, he is protecting the withdrawal of his forces and such of his equipment and supplies as he can rescue. Secondly, he is continuing to carry out the policy of his master to wage delaying actions everywhere so long as possible.

It's vastly important to Hitlerdom now to delay an Allied crossing of the Rhine to the last minute, for just east of the River lies the Ruhr, the last great industrial area left to the Reich. The Ruhr is food and drink for the German military machine. General Eisenhower has his big guns pumping high explosives across the Rhine into the Ruhr, and we get the good news today that the Krupp armament works at Essen—one of the world's most extensive plants—is within range of our guns.

The American First Army today is closing in on that prize of prizes, the cathedral city of Cologne and infantry combat for the ancient Rhinish city may even now be under way. This terribly bombed city has a double value from the military standpoint. It is one of Germany's chief railway centers. And its loss will be a heavy blow to German morale.

Cologne has been a beautiful city, I suppose, but to me it always has stood for the ugliness of Prussian militarism. I had headquarters there for a considerable time at the end of the last war, and saw much of this arrogant Prussianism. I never think of Cologne without recalling the sight of a mounted policeman riding his horse up onto the sidewalk and into a crowd of women and little children who were crowded longingly about a shop window, looking at the pretty things. His sole purpose was to force his horse to trample the feet of these helpless folk. That's Prussianism.

We are not yet in position to draw final conclusions as to what developments the end of Rundstedt's rear-guard stand may be. If the Nazi marshal has been able to withdraw strong forces to the east bank of the Rhine and is able to reorganize them quickly, General Eisenhower may make a considerable pause on the west side before attempting a crossing. If Rundstedt's army is badly disorganized, the Allied commander may rush after his enemy to finish him off.

The European weather man again has favored the Nazis by giving them the cover of fog and nasty skies to aid their withdrawal. This has hampered the Allied Air Forces which otherwise would strafe the retreating enemy heavily.

In considering the Allied crossing of the Rhine, it must be remembered that it is a tremendous project. You can't just rush soldiers over and call it a day's work. They must have food supplies and equipment. Under normal circumstances one would expect Eisenhower to take some time to prepare for the crossing, perhaps delaying it until the good weather of spring.

When General Ike does go over the river, it wouldn't be surprising to see that mysterious air-borne army come into play, to land behind the Germans.

OFFICERS WILL MAKE CHECK OF BROWNOUT HERE

Sheriff and City Manager Asked To See Order Complied With

Full co-operation of the city and county officials is assured in connection with enforcing the "brownout" order of the Office of Emergency Management, it was indicated.

Kenneth F. Ermlich, area director of the War Manpower Commission in Ohio, through Ward C. Miller, deputy director WMC in Ohio, has sent the following letter to City Manager W. L. Stambaugh and Sheriff Orland Hays regarding enforcement of the order.

"You, of course, are familiar with the regulation concerning the closing of 'night spots' at 12 midnight. The regulation was issued by the OEM and its enforcement is to be effected by WMC with the aid of local officials. WMC acts only upon notice of non-compliance, being received from local law enforcement officials. Any citizen may report violations to WMC, who in turn asks the local officials to verify the violation. It is not necessary for the citizen to report to WMC, they should report to the local police officials.

"If a violation occurs and the violator fails to correct the violation upon notification by the local officials, WMC may resort to one or more of the following sanctions:

"A zero employment ceiling may be placed on the establishment—this prevents the hiring of any worker;

"WBP may refuse to grant materials;

"ODT may stop all deliveries to the establishment and

"OPA may cancel all the ration rights of the violator.

"The establishment has the right to appeal if they claim they are not violating the regulation. This appeal goes through the local Labor Management Committee of WMC. It is my opinion that we will have no difficulty in your community. Past cooperation indicates that everyone is glad to comply with any regulation in support of the war effort.

"The following is the listing of establishments affected:

"Public or private night clubs, sports arenas, theaters, dance halls, roadhouses, saloons, bars, shooting galleries, bowling alleys, billiard and pool halls, amusement parks, carnivals, roller skating rinks, yacht or country clubs, dance studios or schools, and gambling establishments. Restaurants customarily open all night are not affected, however, juke boxes or other form of music will not be permitted after 12 midnight.

"Governor Lausche has gone along by ordering his various departments to issue new orders that will help enforce this regulation and I am sure that I can depend on your full cooperation. You may find it more convenient to report violations to the local USES manager, Ward Miller, who is also the deputy WMC director for the area."

MUCH GRASS SEEDING PLANNED THIS YEAR

Much grass seed will be sown in Fayette County this spring, and a large acreage of clover will also be sown within the next few weeks.

The many months of dry weather caused the loss of much pastureland in the county, and seeding is now necessary to replace the lost grassland.

FARMER LOSES FIGHT TO ESCAPE NAVY SERVICE IN OHIO FEDERAL COURT

"This court is unable to find any illegality in the action of the draft board which would justify the interference of the court.

"In a proceeding of this character the examination by the court is sharply limited. The court has no authority to examine the proceedings of the draft board and substitute its own determination or conclusion for that of the board."

Crawbaugh's attorney, Frank L. Wiedemann of Marion, said he would appeal the case to the circuit court of appeals, "and to the United States Supreme Court if necessary."

Crawbaugh has been in custody of the Navy, and has been quartered at a Columbus hotel since his induction.

Members of Crawbaugh's draft board and representatives of the Army, Navy and Selective Service agencies attended the hearings.

INSPECTION OF COMPANY D IS TO BE MARCH 9

Dozen Additional Men for Company Needed To Fill Quota

Federal inspection of Company D, Ohio State Guard, will take place Friday, March 9 at 7:30 P. M. at the Armory here, and the public is invited by Captain C. V. Sexton, to be present.

The inspecting officer will be First Lieutenant Ira D. Travis, of Fort Hayes.

Company D is now working hard and expects to pass a good inspection, Captain Sexton said.

At the present time the company has 51 enlisted men, and a dozen new recruits are wanted at once. Applicants may apply to any of the officers of the company.

Inroads have been made in the company personnel by the induction of many of the younger men recently.

As the State Guards are a very essential part of the national defense set-up, Captain Sexton wishes to keep the company as near full strength of 60 enlisted men as possible at all times.

A new scout car is expected to reach the company at any time and this will add materially to the interest in training.

Company D is one of the best State Guard companies in Ohio and is fortunate in having a seasoned military man as its commander.

Federal inspections are usually very rigid and officers and men are always "on their toes" for this event.

BROTHERS FROM HERE REUNITED IN ROME

Mrs. Sol Smith Gets Letters From All Five Sons

If two of the five Smith brothers were happy when they met in Rome about the middle of February, they could take added satisfaction from the joy their meeting brought to their mother, Mrs. Sol Smith of Jeffersonville.

It is the second time, two of the brothers have met since the Americans started fighting in Europe.

Sgt. Lowell Smith wrote his mother that after nearly a month of trying to get in touch with his brothers, Sgt. Hays Smith, they finally made it last month when he got a furlough and met him in Rome.

Not long after the invasion of Africa, Sgt. Denver Smith, now back in this country wearing star-studded campaign ribbons, met his brother, Sgt. Lowell in Algeria. Then they went through the bitter campaigns that finally led to Italy and beyond Rome and never met again.

Mrs. Smith said she received letters from all five of her boys this week—Sgt. Lowell and Sgt. Hays in Italy, Sgt. Denver in Nebraska, Sgt. Charles in France (written before the big push started) and Sgt. Lloyd in India.

We are doing all we can TO MEET THE WARTIME TELEPHONE DEMAND

For more than three years all telephone manufacturing plants have been working full force to turn out electrical weapons and field communications equipment for the army and navy and have made nothing for civilian use. Yet in that period in Ohio, the number of telephones in service has increased by 168,700.

Our shelves long ago were cleaned out. But by stretching our facilities by every means we could devise, we have been able to give service to thousands of applicants who otherwise would have been without it. For instance:

1. Connecting more telephones to our central offices than they were built to handle.
2. Rebuilding thousands of old type of telephone instruments and putting them back in use.
3. Patching up and reclaiming every facility capable of giving service.
4. Making more service available by increasing the number of homes served by party lines instead of private lines.

5. Showing customers how to get more out of their present telephone facilities and persuading many to get along with less.
6. Recovering many instruments by asking business users to release temporarily any telephones not essential in their current operations.
7. Taking extra good care of equipment that cannot be replaced.

The fine spirit of understanding co-operation shown by telephone users has been another factor in making it possible for us to do more with less.

But in spite of this co-operation and our best efforts there are more than 75,000 persons waiting for home telephone service. We do not like to say "no" to anyone. It is our business to furnish service, not refuse it, but our hands are tied.

We will continue to do our level best to spread available service among as many as possible by stretching all facilities to the limit.

Veterans and Civil Service

Every reasonable thing must be done for the returning veteran—he richly deserves it. But in our eagerness to do for him, we must not go to such lengths as to disrupt our economy, for that would defeat our objective and eventually render a dis-service to the veteran himself.

As one aid to veterans, Congress has given veteran preference in the federal civil service. Some state legislatures have already provided civil service preferences for veterans in state employment; other states are now considering it.

To guide governments and the public in adopting a sound program to aid our war veterans to obtain their full share of employment in the civil service, the National Civil Service League has presented a significant and excellent report. The personnel of its committee, dealing with this problem, which includes two college presidents—Robert L. Johnson of Temple University and Harold W. Dobbs of Princeton—and three prominent leaders of business and industry—Lee H. Bristol, vice-president of Bristol-Myers Company; Charles R. Hook, president of American Rolling Mill Company; and William B. Warner, president of the McCall Corporation—is plain indication that this is not the product of starry-eyed idealists, but a sound program by practical men who appreciate that the returning soldier can be helped in a substantial way without undermining our civil service merit system.

State legislatures, most of which are or will be in session this year, and which will be confronted with the problem of caring for veterans in the civil service, should be guided by the league's committee's practical and constructive recommendations, some of which are:

(1) The public interest makes imperative the maintenance of at least the present standards for entrance to the public service. (2) Experience gained in military service and training, and education received through military agencies should be properly evaluated and recognized in determining eligibility and in rating education and experience. (3) Preference should be confined to original entrance and not applied to promotions within the service. (4) Regardless of the extent of privileges accorded, all veterans should be required to obtain at least a passing mark in competitive tests before being entitled to any preferred status. (5) Preference should be granted in the form of credits to be added to earned ratings in examinations, with disabled veterans receiving no more than 10 points, and other veterans no more than 5 points to be added to their earned ratings. (6) A disabled veteran should be defined as one who has been accorded a disability rating of at least 10 percent and is receiving compensation therefor at the time of his application for appointment.

(7) Retention in the service in case of reduction in force or abolition of positions should be based for all employees solely on relative seniority and efficiency, regardless of veteran status. (8) Civil service employees who, while in good standing in the civil service left to engage in military service, should be given credit for seniority purposes for the time served in the military service.

It is the belief of many that the public will agree with the conclusion of the league's committee that these recommendations "would carry out the desire of many citizens to give a reasonable preference to veterans in civil service employment, and on the other hand safeguard the efficiency of our public services, maintain fairness to those already seeking careers in the service, and keep open the doors of opportunity to those now too young to take up arms in defense of our country."

Iwo Jima Needed

Americans listening to radio descriptions of the fighting on Iwo Jima, and reading dispatches concerning the terrible losses suffered by our Marines, wondered whether it was necessary. A Navy spokesman has since made plain the military reasons for the invasion. There were three.

We needed a base which could provide fighter cover for B-29's on their way from the Marianas to Japan; we needed a base near Japan for short-range medium bombers; and it was the only way to stop Japanese raids which were destroying too many Super-forts on fields in the Marianas.

He says that there were three island choices. Hachijo, in the Izu islands, is only 150 miles from Japan, too close for comfort. Chichi, in the Bonins, had one heavily fortified airfield. Iwa was picked because it was easier to attack than Chichi, and had two finished air fields to one on Chichi.

The final victory will save more lives and time, in the long run, than it costs, otherwise the job would not have been undertaken. For, as one Navy spokesman said: "The Marines don't butt their heads up against a stone wall just for fun. But when a base is needed, they will take it."

Treatment of Arthritis by Hypodermic Injection

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M. D.

ARTHRITIS means inflammation of the joints. This inflammation causes the joints to be painful and swollen. Unfortunately, up to the present time the exact cause of certain types of arthritis has not been found, nor have measures for treatment been found which will give complete relief from the disease.

In treating arthritis, the physician makes every possible effort to employ methods that will relieve the symptoms as quickly as possible. Rest, the application of heat and the use of high dosages of certain vitamins, particularly vitamin D, have been found helpful. Some years ago, a method of treating arthritis by injection of an acid—such as lactic acid—into the joints was suggested, because it was found that the fluids in the joint affected by arthritis were alkaline.

Doctor H. Warren Crowe of England thinks that a solution of acid potassium phosphate is better than lactic acid because the acid potassium phosphate gives a more prolonged effect. In carrying out the treatment, the skin over the joint is painted with iodine and then a needle on a hypodermic syringe is inserted into the joint. No anesthetic is necessary except in the case of the hip joint. If there is any fluid present in the joint, it is withdrawn through the needle. Then the solution of acid potassium phosphate is injected slowly. If the injection is given slowly enough, that is, over a period of several minutes, it will be practically painless. If sharp pain occurs, it usually indicates that the needle is not in the joint. After the injection is given, the joint may be loosely bound with adhesive tape, leaving room for some temporary swelling. It is not necessary for the patient to rest after the treatment.

Doctor Crowe has used this method in more than 400 patients. He has carefully studied the results obtained in injection of 284 joints. One-fourth of the joints became painless and attained full movement and normal action. In one-third of them deformity and swelling of the joints were reduced and the movements increased. Two-fifths had only temporary relief. One case was definitely worse after the injection.

The best results are obtained in those cases in which the disease is not causing severe symptoms. Failure occurs if there is too active infection present or the injections are not given into the joint. The best results are obtained in the fingers, knees and wrists. Hip joints may require several injections. The treatment is without any danger when properly used.

VETERANS' GUIDE

BY

MAJOR THOMAS M. NIAL

WASHINGTON—In these reports about veterans' affairs I'll be sparing with opinions because facts can scream loudest. But my opinions that show up won't be cut on the bias.

I won't be sniffing in solemn judgment over the trials of the government attempting to take care of its veterans and the troubles of veterans trying to take care of themselves. I'm not interested in politics unless veterans may be affected, and I have no axe to grind.

When I say "ex-service men," I mean ex-service women, too. Women war and still are in the services with equal grade or rank, and they become "ex-service men" to most of us. Anyway, veterans rights apply equally to women and to men. Even the GI Bill of Rights says, "Whenever used in the Act—the masculine includes the feminine." That's life.

I got a letter from an ex-WAC, now home at Poughkeepsie, N. Y. Although her letter had a faraway APO feeling, she was evidently trying to get used to civilian life, since she sought information about applying for a second, more personal, problem. I gave her the answers—I hope—but I won't discuss the questions here because this isn't a question-and-answer box.

Still, I'll give as much time as I can to letters from you ex-service men or members of your family. I'll attempt to get you the answers to your questions, because I happen to be in a spot where, if I don't know the answers to your questions, maybe I can dig them out. And I may use some of the material, if it is of general value to veterans.

The Veterans' Administration, which the GI Bill of Rights indicates as its executor and first-line source of information, hasn't completed its plans for applying the bill's provisions. There have been some delays. Instructions concerning the loan sections of the bill have only recently been issued.

Probably the V. A. hasn't yet become adjusted to the size of its new task, and has neither the required number of employees nor sufficient equipment to bite into its big, new job.

Congress declared as its intent and purpose that "there shall be an effective job counseling and employment placement service for veterans." This was in the bill passed in June, 1944, Title IV, Sec. 800 which authorized a Veterans' Placement Service Board, named the members, and stated that the chairman may delegate authority to an executive secretary who will automatically become Chief of the Veterans' Placement Employment Service.

The bill became law on June 22, 1944, but it was not until October that Perry Faulkner was named as executive secretary. I talked with him in Washington a short while ago and found him alertly struggling to grasp the reins so he could start driving.

The Veterans' Administration is short-handed in many places. Honorably discharged veterans can get some of these jobs, because they receive certain privileges not extended to others.

HELEN COMES HOME

by Watkins E. Wright

Washington to act as her stooge, and told him to come on to New York and have himself a much-needed vacation. And I'm the goat."

Aggie sighed. "I wish to heaven she'd send me some bait," she said. "As a bait-picker your aunt is tops. The moment the man walked into the place with his letter of introduction, I said to myself, 'Now there's the answer to any maiden's prayer!' Good Lord, Helen, the man's got everything! He's he-man to the nth degree—he's rugged—he's full of that quiet sort of masculine charm that gets ten women out of ten. He's Gary Cooper plus that's what he is!"

"Then suppose you show him the town," said Helen, smiling. "I'd do it in a minute," Aggie came right back. "I didn't feel and look like something a General Grant tank had just pushed off the road."

Helen laid down the nail buffer. "I don't mind being nice to Aunt Minerva's plant manager," she said. "But I don't like the idea of her thinking I'm all set to go fluttery and ga-ga over a man she sends up to charm me. After all, I'm 26 years old—and a woman as old as that doesn't get fluttery over a mere man."

"I do," said Aggie, "and I'm darned near 30—that is, according to the family Bible. According to my feelings at the moment, I'm nearer 130. She sneezed violently and wiped her eyes. 'Anyway, what's so terrible about going back home?'"

"You know perfectly well why I don't want to go back," said Helen. "I thought I made it quite clear to you when I wrote and asked you to help me get a job in New York."

"But that was over two years ago," Aggie said. "And yet I remember your words as though I had just read them. I shall never go back to Lakeville—never, never, never—not after all the humiliation and heartache I have suffered there! Sounds like a line from a mid-Victorian melodrama."

"I agree with you," said Helen, "now that I have more of a perspective." Then she suddenly whirled about and faced her friend. "Were you ever jittered?"

"Who, me?" said Aggie. "Gosh, honey, I wasn't ever engaged, even I can't even say this time a bridemaid but never a bride! I'm in a story or the poem. I might have been a bridesmaid just once, only—"

"Only I let you down," said Helen. "Anyway, Aggie, waiting at the church as a bridesmaid isn't anything like waiting there as an almost bride."

"No, I suppose not," said Aggie. "But I think you should thank your stars that Paul Wentworth did run off with that little fluff-brain, Zoe. It's a darned sight better to let waiting at the church all in one piece than to be found in a wrecked plane in several pieces. And that's where you would have been found sooner or later, if you and Paul had gone on doing stunts in the sky, and scaring the living daylight out of Lakeville folks."

"We didn't do any stunt flying," said Helen. "I loved flying. I learned how to handle the controls, and I might have become a real pilot in time."

"The trouble with that guy," Aggie said, "was too much money and too little sense. If his father hadn't bought him everything he asked for—even to a baby-bus flying machine—he might have amounted to something."

"He may do it yet," said Helen. "I doubt it. Anyway, if he wants to fly a plane, let him do it for Uncle Sam."

Helen said nothing. She was seeing a strip of firm, green meadow land back of the big plantation house in which Paul Wentworth lived with his widower father. She was seeing a small plane, landing there and Paul and herself beside it. "You bet I know how to handle it!" Paul was saying. "There was a flying field near the college, and I spent all my spare time out there with an instructor."

He pulled her to him, looking down into her eyes. "You're going to get used to flying, sweetheart, so that we can honeymoon up among the stars." And she had grown used to it, had found it exciting at first, and then restful. There was something clean and fine and beautiful about soaring far above the troubled old world with the man you loved. The blue sky, Lakeville, and all the old familiar landmarks far, far below. A plane winging its way through the skies. . . . Paul, the wind blowing his blond hair, his eyes eager and gay behind the goggles. And now—

"The thing for you to do," Aggie said, "is have some of the same dog that bit you, or however it is the old saying goes." She smiled at Helen's look of puzzlement. "I mean the medicine that made you sick ought to cure you."

"What on earth are you driving at?" said Helen.

Aggie got out of bed and padded over to the dressing table. "What I mean is this," she said, trying again. "You say a man broke your heart. Okay, let another man mend it! It's as simple as falling off a log."

"And about as sensible as jumping off the Empire State building," said Helen.

Aggie ignored the remark. "In a few minutes," she said, eyeing the clock, "your medicine will be walking into the living room. So get in there and take your medicine. Doctor's orders."

One of the most important of these privileges is that a veteran is entitled to five extra points on a civil service examination. If we have a service-connected disability, we get ten points instead of five, and we automatically go to the top of the list for most jobs. This applies to all civil service jobs as well as those that may be open in the Veterans' Administration.

Aggie ignored the remark. "In a few minutes," she said, eyeing the clock, "your medicine will be walking into the living room. So get in there and take your medicine. Doctor's orders."

"Yes, ma'am," Helen laughed. "You missed your calling. You should be running a department for the lovelorn instead of working days in a store and running a riveting machine at night."

"Listen," said her friend, "when a girl is born homely, and is saddled with a name like Aggie Jones, she sticks to riveting. Only, darn it all, if I don't feel a lot better in an hour than I do now, I won't even be able to get down to the defense school."

"I wish I was going down," Helen said. "I hate to miss, but it can't be helped. I can't let Aunt Minerva down, and leave her masculine paragon to shift for himself. She'd never forgive me. Besides, he's already bought tickets for the theater."

"You mean to sit there and tell me you'd rather be wearing soiled overalls," said Aggie, "than that green chiffon knockout you've got on—and those silver slippers?"

Helen nodded. "Overalls are comfortable, and night school work fascinates me. The machines—the—"

"You're crazy!" Aggie exploded. "You're out of your mind! A girl with your looks preferring a machine to a man!"

"Why not?" Helen shrugged. "My looks have never gotten me anywhere."

"And whose fault is that, I'd like to know?"

"Mine—I suppose you're thinking."

"You're darn tootin' it's your fault," said Aggie. "What could you expect when you waste your looks as well as your time on one man alone—and that one as spineless as an oyster?"

"I think," smiled Helen, "you mean jellyfish."

"Thanks," said Aggie. "That is what I mean."

CHAPTER TWO

HELEN TURNED back to face the dressing table. She eyed her reflection in the triple mirror. She had a nice reflection, she thought, or reflections, rather, since she got three views of herself. A pleasing left profile, an equally pleasing right profile, and a full face that had caused a number of men in her time to turn for a second and a third look. It was not, of course, any match for the face of that other Helen, the one that had launched a thousand ships, but it was certainly not a bad face as faces came and went. In fact, it had been considered quite a face down home, down in the North Carolina town where she had been born and reared, a town that smelled so beautifully of Cape Jasmine, magnolias and long-leaf pines. "Your face is shaped like a heart," Paul had once told her, "and your hair is like wheat ripening in the summer sun." Only the trouble with her face, she thought, with a touch of bitterness, was that it hadn't kept Paul from eyeing with interest the face of the new girl, Zoe Norris, who was—

"Dollars to doughnuts you're thinking of that Wentworth guy," said Aggie, unable to remain silent a moment longer.

"The doughnuts are yours," said Helen. She looked up at Aggie, who was now removing the curlers from her hair. "He keeps coming to mind," she said unhappily. "I've been congratulating myself that I'd gotten over the humiliation that the time I'd spent in New York had more or less wiped out a lot of memories that hurt. And now—in walks this man Brownell, and—"

"What's he got to do with it?" Aggie demanded.

"It's hard to explain, Aggie. Helen said, "I don't really understand it myself. But seeing him made me think of the dreams I once had in Lakeville, and the dreams made me think of Paul."

She stopped short, and then said: "Maybe I'm one of those one-man women, you know, the sort who never love but one man, no matter how he acts or what he does."

"That's utter tommyrot," said Aggie, pulling Helen to her feet. "Nobody but a weak-minded, idiotic female would keep loving a man who wasn't worth the powder and shot that it would take to blow out what passes for his brains."

She gave the other girl a little shove. "Get on in the other room," she said, "and be all set to greet the new man. And for Pete's sake—smile."

Helen walked slowly to the door opening into the living room. She paused there. "What are you going to do when he asks?"

"Don't bother to ask me," said Aggie. "I'm going to soak in a tub of hot water, and then see if I can drag the carcass downtown to the school."

"Why don't you stay home tonight and rest?"

"I can't—there's a war on."

"What of it?" said Helen. "We won't lose the war, even if you do miss an evening of riveting."

"Maybe not," Aggie retorted, "but I want to get through my six-week training course with no black marks against me. Defense plant owners are coming in every day now and plucking workers for jobs. Who knows but that one day soon Little Aggie will be spotted and plucked by a man with—"

"—with touches of gray at his temples," said Helen. "And deep brown eyes."

"How ever did you guess it?" said Aggie, laughing.

"You talk in your sleep," said Helen, and went on into the living room.

Moving about in a housewifely sort of way, she straightened a rug, padded a pillow, and rearranged a stack of books. Then she found herself gazing at a picture of her aunt that stood upon a small table. Aunt Minerva was posing in front of the Miller Mills, an axe handle in one hand and a blueprint in the other. "Axe handles and the Miller family are synonymous," she had once said. "The Millers eat axe handles, sleep axe handles and dream axe handles. And your Uncle Ike Miller got so he actually looked like an axe handle." Come to think about it, Helen now recalled, Aunt Minerva had been holding an axe handle the day when she walked in to show her the note from Paul, saying that he and Zoe Norris had eloped. She had even waved it like an over-sized baton to emphasize her words. "Good riddance to bad rubbish!" she had said. "I never did think Paul Wentworth had any gumption, and now I know it—running off with a little nitwit!"

Helen turned away from the picture and walked over to the window. She pulled back the draperies and looked out into the quiet of the dimmed-out street. But she was not seeing the grayness, the air reeked with the white helmet, nor the group gathered about the man who was giving a demonstration of how to operate a stirrup pump. Instead, she was seeing the musty old office of the Miller Mills, seeing herself there with her aunt.

"Yes, Aunt Minerva. I hope you won't mind."

She had just announced her intention of leaving Lakeville, Aggie having written to say that she was coming to New York.

"I hate to have you go," Aunt Minerva said. "But since you've made up your mind, I reckon there is nothing I can do about it."

"No, Aunt Minerva, there isn't," she had replied. "I've simply got to get away. Lakeville is impossible for me now."

"You'll come home for your vacations, won't you?"

She had shaken her head. "You can come up to New York to visit me," she'd said. "Aggie and I will put a cot in the living room for you, and you can—"

"If you expect a woman as large as I am to sleep on a cot," her aunt retorted, "you're crazy! Don't forget I still like to sleep on two feather beds, and in a four-poster. I like plenty of room. I'm a rough sleeper. I am—and I snore."

But Aunt Minerva had come up to New York. It was a year later, when she couldn't stand the loneliness of the big old Miller home—stead any longer. Helen remembered with a smile the day her aunt had come barging in, after a stay in Washington.

"I'm not as bull-headed as you are," she had announced. "So here I am. You take after your mother's side of the family, Helen. The Burnetts always were as stubborn as mules."

"But, Aunt Minerva," she had replied, "what on earth took you to Washington? You've always hated the place. You said it was the hottest place on the top side of the globe in summer, and the coldest in winter."

"It still is," her aunt said. "But I had to see Senator Simpson—the old fraud—and, so, hot or cold, cold or hot, I went." She eyed the cot. "Is that where I'm to sleep, as if I didn't know?"

"Yes, Aunt Minerva. I hope you won't mind."

"I'll manage," was her aunt's reply. "But if I roll off during the night, and the ceiling falls on the feds below, don't blame me."

"I'll serve them right," Helen said. "They're forever giving noisy parties and keeping Aggie and me awake." Then, changing the subject, she asked: "If Senator Simpson is an old fraud, why did you want to see him?"

"I used the word as a term of affection and admiration," Aunt Minerva said. "As a matter of fact, I might have married the man if I hadn't been saddled with an axe handle factory, and a stubborn niece." She looked about the room and frowned. "Don't tell me you and Aggie Jones have dug in here to die old maid. Don't you ever see any men at all?"

"Of course we do," she answered. "But it's all very platonic."

Kenneth Drake, who suffered an attack of appendicitis, while in Springfield City Hospital, for treatment of severe burns, is reported slightly improved, but not strong enough to undergo an appendectomy.

Mr. and Mrs. Lew Wallace, of Wilmington and Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Summers of New Antioch were Sunday dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Guy Brown.

Mr. Harry Pierce, formerly of Sabina but now of Fairfield, is reported slightly improved from his serious illness at Miami Valley Hospital, in Dayton.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Watson will move this week from Akron to the Blakley home on East Elm Street, recently purchased by them.

ORA BELLAR, JR., DIES AT HOME OF PARENTS

We Must Meet Our Fat Salvage Quota for March!

THE NATION'S fat-salvage goal for March is 26,550,000 lbs. To realize that tremendous amount, this community—and every other in the nation—must fill its quota. Won't you go all out to help put the drive over the top this month?

Remember! Your country is depending on those used fats to help make medicines, bullets, synthetic rubber, soaps for military and civilian use, and hundreds of other essentials.

Check your own savings by this check list. Maybe you've been overlooking some of these sources.

Approved by OPA and WFA. Paid for by industry.

HOW TO GET EXTRA RED POINTS!

1. SAVE all bits of fat you trim from meat, and fat scraps left on plates. Keep them in a small bowl and, once a week, melt them down.
2. SCRAPE pans before washing them. No amount is too small to be of use...even a tablespoon helps!
3. SKIM stews, soups, and gravies while they cook. Afterwards, chill them and scoop off the fat.
4. SAVE water in which you cook hot dogs, sausages, and ham. Chill, and scoop off the fat.
5. KEEP the can (any tin can will do) on the back of the stove where it's handy. When full, take to your butcher. Get 2 red points and 4¢ for every pound. Start today!

We present Nelly Don's FAIR WEATHER SUIT to appear seasonally in different designs, but always the same quality, styling, and fit. Note the tailoring... the collarless neckline... the ingenious detail across the high yoke. Russian Cord Sanforized Cotton. Blue, Flag Red, Brown. 10-40.

MANILA BATTLE IS DESCRIBED BY COL. H. L. HAYS

Former Washington C. H. Man Takes Part in Liberation of American Prisoners

Lieut. Col. Harold L. Hays has been so busy since he got into Manila shortly after the sensational American invasion of Luzon that he has asked that the last letter he wrote to his brother, Ralph Hays, and Mrs. Hays here be more or less of a family message and to pass it around among his many relatives in Washington, C. H. and Fayette County. Written on Feb. 9, the letter added that "it looks like it won't let up for a while" and went on to say "it is very tough now and the street fighting is house to house."

Lieut. Col. Hays, spent his early life here where he went through the city schools—and, incidentally, was one of the stars of the high school and YMCA basketball teams. For a time he was head of the OS & SO Home at Xenia and was granted a leave of absence as head of the Boys' Industrial School at Lancaster when he entered the service. His family is living in Columbus until after the war.

Lieut. Col. Hays was home on a 30-day leave on the rotation plan last summer. He returned late in September to bloody Bougainville to rejoin his 37th Division and then go with the Ohio outfit along the road to Tokyo.

Excerpts from his letter telling of the conquest of Manila and liberation of prisoners follows:

"I believe the most spectacular incident was connected with internment in the prison my old regiment captured. The Japs had started a large fire that burned block after block. It looked like it would burn the prison so we evacuated all of them to where we had just moved that evening. It was all done late at night and everyone was hopping around busy as bees, getting trucks, cleaning up space, getting equipment, digging latrines, setting up kitchens and the many other things necessary."

"There were a large number of military prisoners of all nations but the majority were Americans. They had been in prison for more than three years. They were all very thin and yet all of them were very happy and cheerful. Many had to be lifted in and out of the trucks they were so weak."

"There were also numerous American civilians, men, women and children, many families as well as individuals. They had only arrived at this prison a short time ago. They were previously in another camp and treated fairly well. Their physical condition was much better than that of the soldiers. It just made your heart ache to see how happy they were. They were afraid the penitentiary would burn down. It made us happy to know that each had contributed at least some effort to evacuate and fix them up for the night."

"The next day I visited the internment camp at the University. All of the civilians there were in the same poor physical condition as the soldiers. Perhaps we can expect poor treatment for our captured soldiers, but there certainly is no reason to subject women and children to the same treatment. Nor does there appear to be any humane reason to shell a place known by them to contain civilian refugees."

"The fire itself was fascinating as fires can be. It covered several city blocks, I guess the shopping district. The flames were high in the air lighting up the whole sky. Huge clouds of smoke rolled to the heavens."

Although there was nothing in his letter to indicate that Col. Hays knew anything about it, a former Washington C. H. man, Philip DeVault was among those liberated from Santo Tomas prison. His father, James DeVault, received word from the War Department a little more than a week ago saying the former soldier who married a Filipino girl and had taken up residence in Manila was released when the American forces swooped down on the Jap garrison. The message said his condition was "fair." No further word has been heard from him, but his father is hoping to get a reply to the cable he sent him.

M. E. CHURCH DIES OF HEART ATTACK

Former Washington C. H. Man Lived in California

M. E. Church, 45, died of a heart attack while driving a bus from San Miguel to Redwood City, California. Church is a former resident of Washington C. H. and was living in Redwood City at the time of his death.

Surviving are his widow and one month old daughter, Lorene; his mother, Mrs. John Church of East Temple Street; three brothers, Roy of Houston, Texas; Wayne, of Gallipolis and Ernest of Mt. Sterling; and three sisters, Mrs. C. A. Shasteen, San Diego, California and Mrs. Harold Calender and Miss Mable Church of Washington C. H.

Funeral services will be held Tuesday at Redwood City and burial will be made in the family lot of a cemetery in nearby Gilroy, California.

400 LUNCHESES SERVED IN SCHOOLS DAILY

Four hundred lunches were served daily in the city schools during January and February, Miss Marguerite Mueger, school lunchroom supervisor, said today.

At the high school, 8,710 meals were served. Eastside and Sunnyside recorded 4,574 and 3,626 for a total of 16,912 lunches served in the three schools.

Monday creamed meat on biscuit, peas, spring salad, sandwiches, fruit and milk were served. Menus for the rest of the week are:

TUESDAY: Beef and noodles, green beans, rice, sandwiches, apple salad and milk.

WEDNESDAY: Liver and onions, creamed potatoes, spinach, sandwiches, fruit and milk.

THURSDAY: Southern frankfurter dinner, sweet potatoes, sandwiches, fruit and milk.

TOWNSHIP AND COUNTY ROADS ARE EXCELLENT

Most of Them Protected by Sheet of Ice During Many Weeks

Reports from throughout the county indicate that the county and township roads have come through the winter to-date in the best condition in years.

From about December 10 until late in February most of the roads were covered with a coating of ice, and traffic was about one-tenth normal, with the result that when the final thaw came, the surface of the roads was in excellent condition.

Some of the blacktop roads required a small amount of patching, while the macadam roads seem to have come through the winter to-date in exceptionally fine condition.

Dragging or scraping some of these roads to keep them in good condition, has been under way as weather permitted.

Unless weather during the remainder of the winter and early spring is unusually severe, Fayette County's highway system, outside of some of the concrete paving, will require little additional patching to be in good shape.

State and township crews have been repairing roads as weather permitted.

PLAY ON THURSDAY AT WHS AUDITORIUM

Thespian Club Presents 'The Barretts of Wimpole Street'

"The Barretts of Wimpole Street," one of the first plays to be presented for the public at the high school this year, is slated for Thursday at 8:15 P. M. in the high school auditorium. Profits will be invested in War Bonds.

Produced by the Thespian Club, the play is the familiar drama of Elizabeth Barrett Browning's romance with Robert Browning. The Thespian Club, a national drama organization, is sponsored by Miss Sara Keck and has a membership of 13 seniors. Requirement for membership are outstanding interest and ability in stage work and two years of membership in a high school dramatic club or class.

Another requirement is that a play produced by the members must be presented to the public each year. The thirteen seniors chose "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" for their presentation. The War Bonds purchased will be used to add three steps to the auditorium organ as a memorial to all former students, whether graduates or not who are in any branch of the service.

Reserved seat tickets may be obtained at Patton's Bookstore.

PRECIPITATION IN FEBRUARY IS ABOVE AVERAGE

Average Temperature for Month Was Slightly Below Normal

During the month of February, as shown by the summary made by Weather Observer Chalmer Burns, total precipitation, not including many inches of snow, was 3.79 inches, compared with a normal precipitation of 2.74 inches.

The snowfall probably raised total precipitation to between 4 and 4.5 inches of water, so that, with the melting snow and ice, the ground was thoroughly soaked for many feet.

Average temperature for the month was 31.6 degrees compared with a normal of 32 degrees.

The average maximum temperature was 42.3 degrees and average minimum was 21.1 degrees.

During the month, thunderstorms were recorded on one day, and winds were chiefly from the west, southwest and north-west, the report shows.

Ten clear days, six partly cloudy and 12 cloudy were noted by Observer Burns.

Much of the time in February the sheet of ice and snow covered the community, with the break-up coming in the latter part of the month.

Give It A CHANCE To Help Feel BETTER

You can help your bowels to act properly by making it a habit to move them at regular times every day. If an occasional attack of bowel sluggishness causes headache or temporary minor intestinal distress, give TONJON Nos. 1 or 2 a chance to remove the waste matter accumulated in the bowels. Then see for yourself how much better you will feel.
